ORIGINAL FROM THE START

In the early 1960s, adidas embarked on a mission to expand the brand into the American market. Their US distributor suggested that basketball offered the best opportunity. For several decades, the sport had been lacking in any significant innovation in both design and technology. But Horst Dassler, son of the company founder, had a vision and a love for the game, so he began development work on a shoe that was to become the Superstar.

WHERE SPORT AND ARTS MERGED

The story of the adidas Superstar started on the basketball court but rapidly moved onto the streets of New York. First adopted in NBA championships in the early 70s, the adidas Superstar quickly became a counter-culture classic and the must-have streetwear staple for up-and-coming musicians and skateboarders alike. The name Superstar felt fitting, and today athletes, artists and everyday stars continue to make this iconic shoe their own. With over 50 years on the street, the iconic silhouette has been re-imagined time and time again and continues to be at the forefront of modern sneaker culture.

FROM THE DESIGN TEAM...

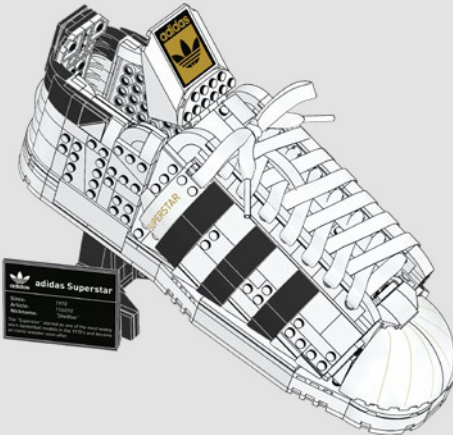

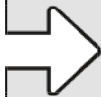

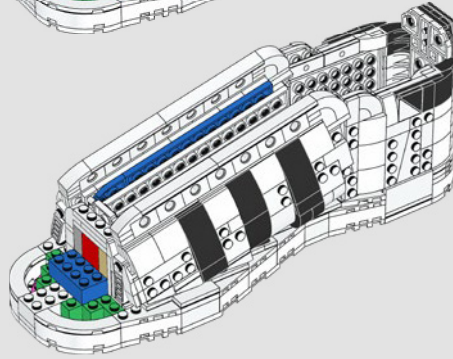

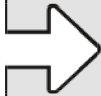

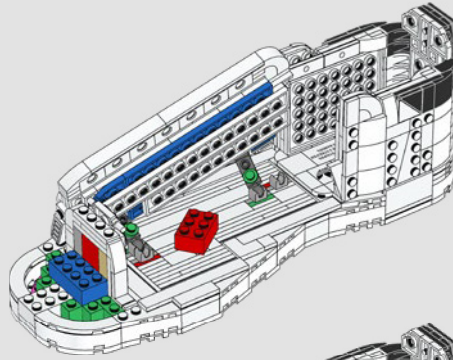

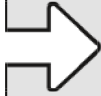

With a deep passion for both LEGO® building and adidas Superstar footwear, Senior LEGO Designer, Florian Müller, was the perfect person to create the LEGO version of this famous shoe.

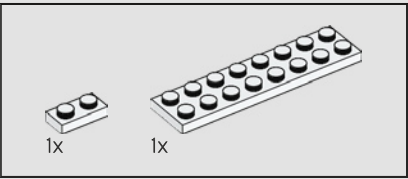

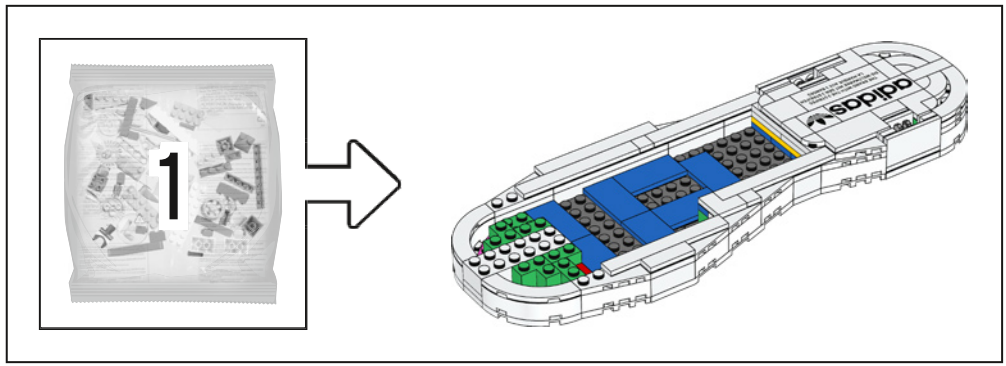

“My task was to reproduce as many of the iconic details of the sneaker as possible, while ensuring the overall build experience was still fun and fulfilling.” Given the Superstar’s hoop-to-hip-hop cross-over, Florian also ensured you can display your finished shoe with or without its lace!
