Principles to Inspire your Familie to Play Well

Developed in collaboration with parenting expert Jessica Joelle Alexander.

Children will continue to lead the way. As adults we must commit to protect and prioritise play. Because our children's future depends on it. Because you and your family deserve it. Because society needs it. Play Well.

1 Challenge Your Mindset

The benefits of play are profound for our children, families and society. Believe in them and commit to making play a priority.

Encourage Free Play

Free, self-directed play empowers your children, so they develop confidence, autonomy and self-esteem.

3 Kickstart with Physical Play

Just ten minutes of an activity that gets hearts pumping and creates laughter helps your familie to connect in a way that is fundamental to family play.

Variety is key

There are many ways to play: physical, creative, emotional, social, digital and cognitive. Balance and variety is essential to develop a breadth of skills.

Go with the Flow 5

When play starts to unfold easily and effortlessly, note what you were doing... then do more of it the next time you play.

6 Think Creativity over Mess

Children don't see mess, they see a stimulating environment full of tools to help them be creative. Adopting this view should help us leave out toys and craft supplies more easily.

Embrace Mistakes

If your child makes a mistake when you are playing, don't tell them or fix it straight away, let them figure it out for themselves. Help to support and not direct, it will help build resilience and a growth mindset.

Be Silly 8

Children like seeing parents being silly. Funny voices, mimicry and physical actions help children flex their imaginations and storytelling abilities.

Plan a Family Playdate

Children love having something to look forward to, so plan a family playdate together. Let them call the shots. Planning the date themselves will encourage them to be creative and train their decision-making skills.

10 Gamify Chores

A simple way to make chores more fun is just to put on some music and turn dusting or folding into a dance party. Or add an element of competition by trying to beat the clock, turning chores into precious bonding time.
